

MAYOR WILL GIVE WELCOME ADDRESS

Greeting Will be Extended to Visitors After the Big Parade on Monday Night.

LINE OF MARCH ANNOUNCED

Floral Parade on Wednesday Morning and Madrigas Friday Night Proving Attractive.

There is just one topic of discussion in Seymour, and, as everyone can guess it is the fall festival which will begin Monday and continue until Saturday night. Arrangements are being rapidly completed so they will be no delay when the time comes for the big event to start. The farm display booths have been placed, part of the decorations are up, the "Made in Jackson County" tent is erected, some of entertainment platforms are made and quite a number of the concession stands are going up. The electricians are suspending the additional lamps and it is very evident that the street scene will be one of unusual splendor and brilliancy.

The committee has announced the plans for the parade which will be held at 7 o'clock, sharp, Monday night. The police department will lead the procession and will be followed by Mayor Ross and the members of the city council. Next will come the members of all the committees who have so successfully planned the festival. The marchers will be supplied with red lights and other fireworks to be used along the line of march.

The parade will start from the festival headquarters, over Jackson's jewelry store, at 7 o'clock, and as the chairman of the committee stated, this does not mean 7:15. It will then march on Chestnut street to Bruce street, countermarch on Chestnut to Second then east to Ewing and return on Second to the main stage on west Second street near the headquarters. At this place the Mayor will deliver his address of greeting and will welcome the visitors to the city. After the parade the evening performances will begin and the festival will be a reality.

The committee desires that especial attention be called to the floral parade on Wednesday morning and the Madrigas on Friday evening. The floral parade will surpass anything of the kind that has ever been seen in southern Indiana and will compare very favorably with some of the spectacular parades that have been witnessed in the larger cities. A large number of automobiles and other vehicles will be decorated for this event. Everyone is urged to take part and even if an automobile owner does not desire to decorate his machine he is asked to join in the procession.

Two prizes have been offered. One will be awarded to the best decorated machine in Jackson county outside of the city and the other will be given to the best decorated vehicle belonging in this city. It is already known that scores of machines and vehicles will be decorated for this event and that it will be one of the most attractive features of the week.

To say that the young people of Seymour are enthusiastic and delighted over the Madrigas plans is putting it very mildly. Of course, everyone on the streets Friday night will be masked and some very unique and novel costumes will be seen. There will be no boisterousness or rowdiness on the streets and the committees assure everyone that they need have no hesitancy in masking and joining with the hugh party of funmakers. There will be no confetti, whips or canes. The committee decided that these were objectionable and they were therefore eliminated. Friday night promises to be one of the most enjoyable times of the entire festival week for hilarity and gaiety will reign supreme.

LOCAL APPLE CROP SAID TO BE ABOVE AVERAGE

Winter Varieties are Being Packed and Orchardists Find a Profitable Market.

Hundreds of barrels of choice apples are being picked in this county each day. The quality is said to be above the average and the yield is good. The returns are especially heavy in the orchards that have been sprayed and carefully pruned. Because of the short apple crop in the northern part of this state the price of Indiana apples is good and the orchardists declare that the crop will be profitable.

There is unusual activity at the Kingston Orchard, east of the city, where a number of men are employed to handling the crop. During the next few days more than two thousand barrels will be packed and have already been sold at a good price.

The Grimes' Golden are in perfect condition and other varieties that are suitable for cold storage purposes are free from imperfections. Some of the orchardists are holding the crop in cold storage believing that the price will be better during the holiday season and in the late spring. The cooper shop is employing a full force of men in an effort to meet the demand for barrels and some of the orchardists have been delayed because they could not pack the crop as rapidly as it was picked.

SEYMOUR MILITIAMEN WILL ATTEND THE G. A. R. MEETING

Entire Company Will go to Columbus Tonight on a Special Car and Will Participate in Parade.

Every member of the Seymour Company of Indiana National Guards will go to Columbus tonight to participate in the parade at the G. A. R. meeting. The militiamen will leave at 6:18 on a special car. The company made arrangements to attend the district meeting after receiving an invitation from Mayor Volland of Columbus yesterday afternoon. They will return home tonight.

Quite a large number of the G. A. R. veterans and their wives attended the meeting today. A parade was held this morning and veterans from all parts of the district were in the line of march. A special program was arranged for this afternoon and tonight Governor Ralston and Hugh Th. Miller, of Columbus, will deliver addresses. A parade will be given before the public meeting.

Farmers' Club Notice.

The Farmers' Club building will be open to the general public from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. every day while the Free Fall Festival is in progress but beginning Monday, October 12th it will be open only to Club members and their families from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily except Sunday.

By order of, o3d-w1 The Board of Trustees.

PUBLIC MAY VISIT CLUB DURING WEEK

After Fall Festival Closes Only Members Will be Permitted to Enjoy the Privileges.

MATRON HAS BEEN APPOINTED

Miss Florence Love is Named by Trustees for Position—Regular Hours from 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Trustees of the Farmers' Club held their first meeting at the new building this morning and formulated plans for a public inspection. The interior of the building is not yet completed but all the work will be finished and the furniture placed in position before Monday night when the doors will be opened to visitors. The decorators and plumbers have almost completed their contracts and as soon as they leave the building the furniture which has already arrived will be arranged. This will not require a great length of time as the plans have been made in advance.

The trustees have appointed Miss Florence Love as matron of the club and she began her work today. As Miss Love was reared on a farm she is familiar with the needs and demands of the members and will give her personal attention to the work. She will remain at the club from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night and will be ready to aid the members in any way she can. The trustees explained to her today just what her duties would be.

It has been decided to permit the public to inspect the building during the fall festival week but after Saturday night, October 10, the privileges will be extended only to the members. The by-laws of the club provide that only those who gain a livelihood wholly or in part from agriculture pursuits are eligible to membership. This provision will be strictly enforced and people living in this city who are not members will have no privileges at the club. The matron has received instructions to see the card of membership from all those who she does not know to be members. There is absolutely no cost attached to membership and the only requirement is that farmers or other eligible must secure the membership cards which have been left at the three Seymour banks.

The trustees decided at their meeting today to keep the building open from 8 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m. each day during the festival in order that everyone in Seymour may have an opportunity to inspect it. After the festival closes the regular hours will be enforced to the letter, and when the club is closed the gates at the entrance will be locked.

The tablet stating that the Farmers Club building was erected to Capt. Meedy W. Shields, "founder of Seymour and one of the leading farmers of his day," has been placed above the large open fire place in the living room. A picture of this tablet will be used on the stationery which will be provided for the use of the club members.

PROPOSES CHANGES IN REVENUE BILL

Congressmen Endeavoring to Frame a Satisfactory Measure to Raise $105,000,000.

AUTOMOBILES NOW IN LIST

Believed that Bank Capital and Surplus will not be Taxed—Work on Final Draft.

That the tax on bank capital and surplus as provided by the emergency revenue bill now pending before congress will be eliminated is the belief in Washington, according to dispatches today. Bankers throughout Indiana have been watching his bill and have filed a protest against the proposed assessment. The original bill provided that the capital, surplus and undivided profits should be taxed at the rate of $2 for each $1,000. It is reported that the sentiment in favor of striking out this clause is growing.

Local people are watching the action of congress on this measure for under its provisions almost every family in the city would have its share of the additional burden. Congress is imposed with the duty of raising approximately $105,000,000 to meet the deficiency in the custom receipts and have decided upon the emergency or stamp tax to obtain the money.

The list of articles that will be taxed if the bill is not changed before it is passed is large. Since it has been proposed to eliminate the tax on bank capital the tax on other articles will be increased to make up the amount estimated that would be raised from that source. A move is now in progress to tax bank checks, letters of credit and drafts two cents each. If this provision is accepted every person who cashes a check will be required to put a two cent stamp on it. It is further proposed to increase the tax on rectified whiskeys to five cents a gallon and it is thought that this would yield a revenue of about $5,000,000. An increase of twenty-five cents a barrel is proposed on beer which would make the total $1.75. The revenue from this source is estimated at $52,000,000.

Automobile owners will be interested to know that a tax of twenty-five cents for each horse power is being contemplated. This provision has been proposed since the tax of 2 cents per gallon on gasoline has been taken off. Many other articles which are used by every family will come under the special tax bill so that the public generally will feel the effect.

Congress is endeavoring to tax as few articles as possible so that the heaviest burden will fall upon those most able to pay it. The bill, it is understood, will be passed and placed in force before congress adjourns so that in a very short time the people will know just what provisions were finally decided upon and can figure up how much the law will cost them.

FRENCH ATTEMPT TO BREAK THE LINES AT MULHAUSEN

Allies Are Heavily Reinforced by the Garrison of the Verdun-Toul Line of Forts.

By United Press.

Berlin, October, (via The Hague)—The war office said today the general situation continues with little change. The official report declares the French have been heavily reinforced in Alsace Lorraine and are attempting to break through the lines near Mulhausen.

"In every instance," says the report, "our troops have beaten back the attacks of the enemy inflicting heavy losses. The enemy is assisted by the garrisons of the Verdun-Toul line of forts and continue their efforts to prevent the complete investment of the positions. We are holding out line intact at every point in this territory."

"The French are being heavily reinforced on our extreme left center but we have been able to hold them in check. The general fighting on our right continues with great severity and there has been not a decisive victory by either side in this section. Meanwhile the forts at Antwerp are being bombarded at long range with success."

MILLION RUSSIAN TROOPS IN CONTACT WITH GERMANS

Grand Duke Nicholas in Command of Russian Central Army in Sharp Engagement.

By United Press.

Vienna, October 1 (via Rome)—Four gigantic battles and two fort bombardments involving fully 6,000 are in progress in the east today. It will be several days before the fighting reaches a crisis. At the present it is impossible for the Germans to cross the Nieman River.

A German army is engaged with 500,000 men in the big pine forest of Aigue.

The great Russian central army under the direction of Grand Duke Nicholas made up of one million Russian troops were today reported in contact with a German advance guard on a line of communication to Krakow.

NO WORD HAS COME FROM FRONT ABOUT GEN. FRENCH

London Bulletin Says He is "Probably too Busy at Present to Communicate" to Officials.

London, October 1.—Despite noticeable optimism of leading officials of the war office not a single word was obtainable today regarding the war situation. No word has been received from General French and the report said: "he was probably too busy at present to communicate." But the unofficial reports indicated the belief that the Germans are retreating in France.

"NO CHANGE" AGAIN DECLARES REPORT

Leading Military Authorities at Paris Are Confident but do Not Announce a Victory.

HOLDING THE GERMAN LINE

Stated That Extreme German Right Has Been Routed and New Alignment is Expected Shortly.

By United Press.

Paris, October 1—Supreme confidence prevailed at military headquarters today. The Battle of the Aisne is already claimed as a sweeping French victory. There is no disguising of the joy over the victory of General Gallieni, but there is no deviation in the official statement which declared "there is no change."

The same announcement stated "the French left progresses north of the Somme and we also make progress in the Woevre region." In explanation of this, however, it is pointed out that the French war office has already announced that it will not be put in the position of making premature announcements of victory.

"Not until we are actually holding the entire German line will we declare a complete victory," declared one of the high officials on duty here to assembled newspaper representatives this afternoon. "Personally we are confident. We know the Germans are retreating at some points and that they have been fighting in desperation and their extreme right has been completely routed. But that does not justify a claim of a sweeping victory."

"So long as the Germans hold the lines along the Aisne and their center remains unchanged, so long will there be danger that they may yet turn the tables. But every day of our success at both ends of the long battle lines means much and unless I am greatly surprised you will see an entirely new alignment by the first days of next week."

60,000 WOUNDED GERMANS ARE TAKEN TO COPENHAGEN

By United Press.

London, October 1.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the London Evening News wires that 60,000 German wounded have arrived at Cologne. The great exposition buildings have been transformed into hospitals where the wounded are being cared for. Most of the wounded are victims of the artillery duels which have been in progress along the Aisne. Many of the soldiers brought here had their arms and legs shot off.

Washington, Oct. 1.—New shipping safety regulations for moving picture films went into effect today. Under orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission beginning today, "movie" films cannot be shipped except tightly closed, metal cases inclosed in a strong, spark-proof wooden box, or in spark-proof boxes made of sheet iron. Under former laws regulations films could be shipped in fiber-board boxes. The new films regulations are part of those governing shipment of explosives and other dangerous articles.

HUMAN INTEREST SIDE LIGHTS ON GREAT WAR IN EUROPE

Best Stories Contained In Recent Despatches From the Front.

Awfulness of the Modern Armed Conflicts Strikingly Portrayed.

A GRAPHIC story sent from Ghent gives a clear idea of the horrors of war. It describes a ride in a Red Cross train taking mortally wounded soldiers who had been in the hospital at Malines to the hospital at Ghent.

"We had to take them out," explained the doctor, "because the shells were flying around the building."

We were standing in a longer car on the sides of which were two layers of shelves made of stretchers hung on steel arms. The engine was moving very slowly because, the doctor explained, there were some wounded soldiers on the train who shrieked with pain at every swaying motion of the cars.

We walked through the car and across the platforms to the next car. The doctor pointed his finger toward an upper stretcher in a corner.

"Dead," he said. I looked and saw nothing but a sheet covering a form that swayed grew-somely.

"It's a soldier who was shot through the head. He was dying this afternoon," the doctor continued, "but we brought him along. I suppose moving has killed him, but what were we to do?"

He showed me another wounded soldier who was very nearly gone. There were great bandages about his chest. "Shot through the lungs," explained the doctor.

"He Can't Live Anyhow!"

"Those nurses are trying to stop the pain for him and let him out easily. They'll probably give him too much, but he can't live anyhow."

When we reached Ghent two hours later there was a sheet over him. For him the greatest war in the history of the world had ended during the ride on the train.

The next ten cars of the train were piled with old men and women. Some of them were incredibly old and bent. They came from the home of old folks at Malines, and a nurse pointed out one woman who was more than 100 years old and who had been alive when Napoleon's conquest of Europe was slipping away from him. These old folks, who years before had quit their work and had found a quiet, peaceful corner in beautiful Malines in which to die, were being dragged away by the Red Cross to save from German shells the few short days of their ending lives.

Seeking a Place to Die.

We drew into Ghent late in the evening. Soldiers and nurses took the helpless humans from the cars and started them in automobiles and rigs of all sorts for the hospital. They lifted down the two white sheeted forms, and a black wagon took them away.

Even while this was being done and while the old folks waiting in wheel chairs were chattering like children about the Prussian war in 1870, the citizens of Ghent were crowding the depot trying to get away from the city because they had heard that the Germans were coming.

"There's panic everywhere," said a would be fugitive. "I can't find any place to live."

"And I can't find any place to die," chattered an old woman.

Shrapnel Bullets.

The wounded arriving at Bordeaux tell in every case the same story of shrapnel injuries. The proportion of bullet wounds is so very small that those suffering from them are almost curiosities.

A gunner described the effects of the shrapnel shells when the Germans get the range. He said that of the men working his battery not one escaped injury. This was near Soissons. The officer in charge had both his legs and an arm blown off. The sergeant had an eye torn out.

Seeing so many injured about him, the gunner began to feel as if he himself had suffered some injury, particularly as one of his feet felt numb. He discovered a big hole in his ankle, but felt no pain until he was taken to the field hospital. A shrapnel bullet struck one man near him in the hip and tore the leg open to the knee.

"Stick to the Last Point."

A Petrograd dispatch quotes a Russian officer:

"The Germans are just as brave as we. They stick to it to the last point. When captured they behave very correctly and to all questions answer, 'I have no information to give.'"

"Every one who can hold a gun is being pressed into the service against us. We know that by some dead they leave in the field—men in civilian attire and many sailors from their warships. Children of fifteen and sixteen years, old men, occasionally even women, are fighting us."

"Awful Butchery."

A correspondent of the London Standard, stationed in Paris, sends as follows part of a letter which an Englishwoman there received from her son at the front:

"Life will soon become unendurable here. We have been for eight days holding a village where at least 800 shells fall each day. We are in the thick of the horrors of war. The enemy occupies a ford, and we are told to dislodge him.

"Four days back we made a night sortie, and I assisted at the most awful butchery you can conceive. We made a bayonet charge in pitch darkness, talking to each other to keep in touch."

"The whole country is covered with dead horses and is a very charnel house."

War's Gentler Side.

"In the evening of Sedan day at Berlin," writes a correspondent, "a soldier in his war clothes of gray hobbled about Bismarck's statue before the reichstag building. His left leg was entirely stiff, bandaged, I suppose. His girl was with him; and how all adored him! Fingers, hands and arms were locked, and her eyes never left her hero's face."

"He was well fed, pink cheeked, good looking, and she was poor (judging from her clothes), sallow, short and shrunken looking. She ran over her worn shoes badly, but how happy she was in her adoration; how ecstatic! He was her man; he was safe back from the wars (for the present), and he was a hero, a wounded hero, who twined his fingers with hers before the statue of Victory in the Sieges Allee I suppose the girl doesn't touch very high spots in her life, but one she surely touched on the afternoon of Sedan day of 1914."

Psychology of a Soldier.

The Paris Temps gives excerpts from a letter of a French cavalry officer which throws an interesting light on the psychology of civilized Europe in warfare. He says:

"One must develop a new mentality suitable to the circumstances. War is barbarous. We cook a meal on wood splinters like savages. One must assume savage habits throughout. I have become quite a different man and live without trying to understand why or how. When I have five minutes I sleep, no matter where. When I find water of which I'm sure I drink. When I know tomorrow has arrived I finish today. I believe nothing I'm told."

"Naturally we never know before hand if we are staying or going to move. Orders arrive, and we execute them with no idea of the general plan."

"As for the battle, it is just an infernal noise, with the officers bearing orders at a gallop—that's my job—shells bursting all around, but so numerous one doesn't notice them. Even the horses cease to flinch, which shows it's habit, not heroism that keeps one calm. One ceases to think because thinking tires and therefore is too much physical exhaustion. One accepts what comes. It is just luck. In five days' fighting I never saw a single German. Our infantry say the same. We never see them. We only find their dead."

Children War Aides.

The war has called into being a remarkable organization, literally a "children's crusade," for in every schoolhouse throughout Great Britain the children are being enrolled "for the war," as Earl Kitchener's call for volunteers reads, in the newly formed League of Young Patriots. Queen Mary herself has intimated her full sympathy with the objects of the league and, moreover, has given her consent to the Princess Mary's becoming patron of the league.

Each boy and girl who becomes a young patriot is required to make and fulfill two simple promises:

First.—To God and king and country I will do my duty.

Second.—To those in difficulty or sorrow through the war I will give my best help.

And these are the rules they must keep every day:

First.—Wear the badge of the league.

Second.—Ask daily for a blessing on their country and a speedy end of strife.

Third.—Show special kindness and helpfulness to those in need and trouble.

The badge of the league consists of a white cross on a red ground—the famous Red Cross emblem reversed. The plan of campaign for the school children "crusaders" is outlined in the Teachers' World, the official organ of the league.

Dangerous Sentry Duty.

"This sentry duty, which goes on all along the line, is a most amazing and most dangerous business," writes a correspondent at the front. "On one night Belgian and German sentries could see each other at a distance of 300 yards, and twice it was told of cases where the men exchanged threats and shook their fists at each other. [Sometimes it is more serious. The threats are carried out.]"

Aviator In a Rain of Shells.

Probably no more thrilling spectacle has ever been seen by mortal, says a correspondent describing a duel in the air between a French aviator in a bi-plane and German artillery posted on the ridge commanding the city of Soissons.

The aviator was ordered to ascend, carrying an officer assigned to locate the exact position of the German guns which it was desired to silence. I was able to follow his every movement through a pair of powerful field glasses.

As I watched the air craft swing and turn through the small clouds I realized that the aviator was literally playing hide and seek with death. The shells were bursting near him, but he was always on the alert. The biplane would suddenly surge almost directly upward, then describe a giant spiral, then drop far down, and always the movement came in the very nick of time to spoil the range of the German artillerymen, who were serving their guns with remarkable precision.

The shells were constantly bursting all about the plane, and it was only by the exercise of all of his skill that the pilot was able to keep his machine unscathed. He swung far across the German lines and discovered that the German artillery was posted in a rock quarry, in what was practically an impregnable position, with the guns masked and mounted so that they commanded the entire British-French positions.

The aviator, after reporting to the commanding officer, went up again and passed through the same ordeal. This time, however, he was giving the range to the French artillerymen, who had brought up their powerful three inch guns and posted them advantageously. The Germans were simply showered with explosive shells and shrapnel until they were finally compelled to slacken their fire, although they did not abandon their position.

Oddities In the War News.

Colonel Rousset reports that the death of so many French officers is due to the gold lace and stripes on their uniforms, which makes them good targets for the enemy.

A Russian soldier, called before the commanding officer to be publicly praised for rescuing wounded under fire, was discovered to be a woman. She was permitted to continue serving as a volunteer.

Society women in London go out on the streets and accost every man they meet to enlist in the war for their king. When a man's reply is unfavorable to enlistment the women stick a white feather in his hat.

A German prisoner, recaptured twenty days after he escaped from Bordeaux, said he had lived in the open air on raw snails and raisins.

When a British raw recruit failed to salute a superior officer he was given a long lecture on military regulations. Then the officer said, "By the way, to what company do you belong?" "The Wigan Coal and Iron company sir," was the prompt response.

The kaiser carries in the pocket of his greatcoat a four leafed clover, pressed and scented, for luck. It was carried by his grandfather forty-four years ago. It was given to King William by a little girl, and after Sedan he restored it to her, saying it had brought him victory. It was recently sent the kaiser by the Countess Dehna, who had treasured it many years.

CANS FULL OF MOSQUITOES.

Punch Holes In Discarded Receptacles and Stop Malaria, Doctor Suggests.

Punch holes in the bottom of tin cans and prevent malaria. This is a suggestion for the destruction of mosquito breeding places contained in an article on "Mosquito Malaria" in the New York weekly public health service report.

Mosquitoes, the report says, are the only known agents for the transmission of malaria. Dr. Charles Wardell, professor of zoology in the public health service, made a trip of investigation into the subject of mosquitoes and malaria through a state where there was much malaria and found mosquito larvae by thousands in empty tin cans that had been thrown into boxes or on to trash heaps and in which rainwater had collected. The writer points out what a simple health measure it would have been for a person who opens and empties cans to punch a hole or two in the bottom of each.

Tin buckets that had contained paint, glass bottles, kegs, barrels, water tight boxes and in one case an old iron safe, door side up, all furnished their quota of mosquitoes to add to the prevailing illness.

NEW RECIPE FOR KISSING.

"Safety First" the Object of Physician's Sanitary Suggestion.

At the fiftieth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Homeopathic Medical society, held at Weaversville, Pa., Dr. William F. Snow, secretary of the American Social Hygienic association, gave this recipe for kissing:

Cut out a square of tissue paper.

Subject it to a bath in a sanitary solution.

Place over the mouth.

Then:

Kiss.

But don't wear out the paper or break through.

These precautions, Dr. Snow said, would make kissing safe. There was a suggestion that throwing kisses might be safer.

WOMEN FIGHTERS' REMAINS FOUND

May Be Those of Sir Walter Raleigh's Amazons.

DUG UP ANCIENT POTTERY.

Explorer Lange Tells of Skeletons Exhumed at Mouth of the Amazon River—Interior Tribe Which Has Semitic Features—Adventures With Huge Alligator and Wolflike Fish.

Returning from his South American voyage in the first years of the seventeenth century, we are told Sir Walter Raleigh reported to the queen that a landing party from his ship had been attacked near the mouth of a stupendous river by a swarm of women warriors. Accordingly he suggested the name Amazon for the stream.

Dr. Algot Lange believes that he has rediscovered this lost tribe, among whom the burden of war and industry was borne entirely by the female. Dr. Lange recently returned from a second voyage of exploration through this mighty river jungle. He started about eighteen months ago on a tour of investigation for the University of Pennsylvania. He was commissioned by the Brazilian government to make surveys, investigations and reports. Arriving in the state of Para, he made his way to the mouth of the Amazon and began his interesting work of exploration.

Never Saw a White Man Before.

At the headwaters of the Moju, one of these rivers, he found his unknown tribe, the Arandewaras Indians, a peaceable, semi-agricultural group of 100 or more stark nude savages, who had never seen a white man before and stood in terror of the explorer and his party.

"The most significant thing about the tribe," said Dr. Lange, "was the entirely Semitic character of the physiognomy."

The Arandewaras treated the explorer as best they knew how and let him go his way when the visit was over, teaching him first the ways through the fearful jungle and pointing out to him the wonderful woods to be found there.

The most interesting of Dr. Lange's discoveries were at the mouth of the Amazon, on a big, flat island, browsed on by vast herds of cattle in the dry season and washed over by the sea in the wet. This is the island of Marajo, of about 120 by 100 miles. The Amazon, which is over 200 miles wide at this point, has built the island there from its mighty store of alluvial deposits, and the sea, fighting to hold its own, is underwashing the island even as the river builds it.

Asiatic Race In America.

"The island is never more than a few inches out of the water," Dr. Lange reported. "At high tide it shrinks considerably, and when the Amazon is at flood no island is visible save for the mounds, on one of which my principal story plays. One of these I excavated pretty thoroughly and found the bones and pottery of a tribe which has struck me as distinctly Asiatic."

Moreover, the pottery I dug up on this mound has another and stranger characteristic. If you will look at the vases and idols, the burial urns and bowls, you will find all feminine symbols. The absence of male figuration is striking."

The Original Fig Leaf.

In these urns, too, Dr. Lange discovered the original fig leaf, made of hard baked and marvelously engraved pottery, called the tanga.

"Think of the patience and skill of these people," Dr. Lange said in showing the tangas, vases, platters, basins cups, ornaments and kitchen utensils, all marvelously wrought in clay and burned to fine pottery. "The engraving of these pieces must have taken an enormous time. Most of the forms are geometrical. All are of the most intricate character, and I believe I see Asiatic symbolism looking from all of the decorations."

"The alligator," said Dr. Lange, "is so abundant all through the Amazonian waters that there is a bounty on its head. The alligator is a rank coward. I took few chances with him myself, but my old Indian guide told me he wouldn't be afraid to swim the river as long as he splashed loudly enough. Often when I went into the shallow water to gather pottery the guides kept beating the surface to keep off the alligators. They never came near."

"But piranhas are different. These fish are only about eight or ten inches long, but they are ferocious. They attack in shoals and bite chunks the size of a dollar out of the victim. No splashing and noise scares them off. Once I saw a water hog start to swim one of the narrower Amazon tributaries. He got about halfway when the piranhas got to him. In a minute it was over. He was drowned and the voracious fish were eating him."

Use "Gets-It," Corns Shriveled, Vanish!

It's the New Way, and You'll Forget You Ever Had Corns.

"2 drops put on in 2 seconds, corn shrivels, comes clear off!" That's the marvelous story of "GETS-IT," the new-plan corn cure. Nothing can be simpler for the cure of corns—and it never fails. That's why millions of people are using "GETS-IT" today and throwing away their fussy plasters, sticky tape, toe-eating salves, and "wrapping outfits" that make a bundle around the toe and choke it into pain by pressing either on or around the corn. There is nothing to stick to your stocking, nothing to cause inflammation or rawness, nothing to press on or around the corn. You apply it in 2 seconds. No more knives, razors, scissors or files, with their blood-poison dangers. Try "GETS-IT" for that corn, callus, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"Gets-It" is sold in Seymour by C. E. Loertz and H. H. Carter.

NEW GAME LAWS GO INTO EFFECT TODAY

Regulations Amended to Give Further Protection for Migratory Birds.

By United Press.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Amendments to the Department of Agriculture's regulations for protection of migratory birds, published today, became effective today.

The effect of one of the changes is to permit on the Missouri and the upper waters of the Mississippi the shooting of all migratory game birds for which there is an open season from October 1, 1914 to January 1, 1915. After the latter date the prohibition will be in force again. Other amendments deal principally with the closed season for water fowl in the various localities.

The new regulations provide for a closed season in zone number 1 for all water fowl from December 16 to to September 1 next following. Exceptions to the rule prescribe the open season as follows: In Massachusetts and Rhode Island beginning January 1 and October 1; Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, between January 16th and October 1; New Jersey between February 1 and November 1; Minnesota, North Dakota and Wisconsin between December 1 and September 7.

For zone No. 2 the closed season is between January 16 and October 1, with the following exceptions: Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana between February 1 and November 1; Florida, Georgia and South Carolina between February 16 and November 20; Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma between February 1 and September 15; Texas, Arizona and California, between February 1 and October 15.

Paris, October 1—Here is a touching picture by a French soldier now in hospital in Nancy. Writing to a friend two days after the Battle of Saales Pass (Vosges), close to a spot where the first German flag was captured, he says:

"Do you know why I feel strangely moved just now? I was thinking of the service at church Sunday. The whole company went inside in the early morning and we found the priest there. The church contains a beautiful organ, and Lieutenant S—, who knows I am fond of music, asked the priest permission for me to try the instrument, so I sat down, while all my comrades ranged themselves in the pews.

"I began with the Marseillaise, then the Russian and British National Anthems. After that I played a movement from Massenet; one of Mendelssohn's songs without words; a Romance by Schumann; the Largo in G, by Handel, which profoundly touched the audience; Gounod's 'Ave Marie'; and finally own inimitable 'Chant du Depart.' After that the priest offered a prayer for our armies, and as we left the church the hearts of all of us were very full. That night we entered Alsace and our one thought was, 'we must give them a licking.' If I am spared (for I hope to be back to the front before long,) I want to give a concert in the Strassburg Cathedral."

London, October 1—When the British made their gallant stand against the German advance at Mons, the Middlesex Regiment was once again heroically unfortunate. The regiment, which was originally composed of Londoners from the Middlesex Militia, once carried the unflattering name of the "Steelbacks," because of the men were accustomed to being flogged into order.

It was at the fight at Albuera during the Peninsular War that they displayed their extraordinary bulldog fighting capacity. Out of 25 officers, no fewer than 22 were killed and wounded. Of 570 rank and file were put out of action. It was when the struggle was most sanguinary that the colonel yelled out in encouragement, "Die hard men, die hard!" Since then that time the Middlesex men have been known admiringly as the "Die Hards."

BASE BALL WAR MAY END THIS WINTER

Many of Those High in Great American Game Believe The Federal League is Doomed.

MANY PLAYERS ON PAYROLL

Each Team of New Association Has a Number of Youngsters Who Are a Heavy Expense.

(By Hal Sheridan for United Press)

New York, Oct. 1—Will this winter see the end of the baseball war? Many men high in baseball—men close to the ones who dictate in both the American and National leagues—say that it will.

Just how the windup of this conflict will be brought about, though, is a much mooted question. Out of the many opinions advanced by the ones supposed to know, one fact stands out very prominently. That is that when the time for settlement comes—when Organized baseball opens its arms and takes the young Federal league into them with a kiss of forgiveness—a person by the name of James Gilmore won't be among those present.

This Gilmore person who has really made the Federal league has incurred the everlasting enmity of the powers that be in the organized baseball fold. These persons have made it emphatically plain that if they ever do consent to a peace parley with the Federals that Gilmore will not be admitted to it. And their one demand that they will insist upon to the end—the bitter end—will be the elimination of Gilmore from the spotlight.

To one in the bleachers this doesn't look very good. If the Federal league club owners stand for this they won't be showing much of a portmanlike spirit. And, judging by past performances, they are liable to give Gilmore the gate if by so doing they can land in the select circle themselves.

To illustrate, we will recite the case of one James Powers—the real father of the Federal league. He has dropped out of sight completely, it seems, and still it was only by his diligent work that the league really opened its first season. And he was handed his passports before the end of that season.

The league directors excused their action in decorating him with the Ancient Order of the Tim Can by saying that they had discovered that he was not a good executive. He was too much of a dreamer, they said.

Grant all this, and yet Powers was not treated with fairness. In recognition of what he had done for the league, the league should have taken care of him in some manner.

Powers long had had the "bug" of organizing a third major league. His maiden effort in that line was pulled in 1912, when he tried to put the Columbian league over. That lasted—in a way—almost a season. It was a very sorry spectacle while it lasted as an imitation of a major league but it served one purpose—it implanted the germ of a third major league in the minds of several wealthy men.

The next year found Powers on the job again and by that time he had lined up a representative set of men as backers. At Indianapolis, in the spring of 1913, Powers put through the organization of the Federal Baseball league of the United States. That was the birth of the Federal league of today.

This has all been recited just to show what Powers did for the Federal league. We told you what the Federal league did to Powers—lost him in the shuffle. And now we wonder will they do Jim Gilmore the same way if Organized Base ball insists upon it as one of the terms of settlement?

The Federal league will have to effect some kind of a settlement if it hopes to stay out of the bankruptcy carts. The main reason for this is that the league is carrying enough ball players—or men and boys posing as such—to supply three or four leagues.

Not having any minor Federal league, where it can send players that it doesn't need, the Federal league has to keep on its payroll all youngsters who fail to make good or old timers who are slipping. The reason they don't dare to let any of these go outright is plain. If they did they would scare away stars whom they hope to lure from the American and National leagues. These athletes wouldn't hop to the Feds if they feared they would be set free with no where to go if they started to go badly.

Each team in the Fed league has from thirty to forty players. As twenty-five is the maximum carried by any club during its regular playing season it can be seen easily that the Feds are totting an enormous expense account.

The Feds have taken in at the gate enough money to break even under ordinary conditions. But with the added expense of a vast number of players not needed, the league probably will have a good sized deficit as a whole.

ALLIED FORCES
PRESS NORTHWARD

Germans Continue Their Fierce Attacks in Angle Formed by Oise and Aisne Rivers.

CONTEST VERY DESPERATE

British-French Forces Advance in Alsace and Lorraine—No
News From the East.

London, October 1—While the allied forces are still pushing northward on their left wing, the Germans are continuing their fierce attack in the angle formed by the Rivers Oise and Aisne in the direction of Tracy-le-Mont, which has already been the scene of a success on the part of the allies. The French lines have thus far held solidly. The contest has been singularly desperate, but the allies, by counter-maneuvers, have checked the attempts of their adversaries.

Official reports indicate that the French left must now be pushing toward Cambrai, as it has been reported near Albert, in German as well as French announcements. Even farther north than this the French cavalry is operating. Last week a German force which was sent to Orchies, sixteen miles southeast of Lille, met with superior forces and had to fall back.

An official statement issued from German general headquarters, under date of Wednesday evening, is given in a dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Berlin. It says:

"The Hostile forces advancing to the north and south of Albert (a town of France eighteen miles northeast of Amiens) have been repulsed. The front battle line is without news.

"In Argonne our attack is progressing steadily, though slowly. At the outer forts on the Meuse the line is without change.

"Yesterday the enemy advanced in Alsace and Lorraine in the central Vosges. His attacks were energetically repulsed. The eastern theatre is without news."

An unofficial dispatch from the Russian capital says that the fighting along the East Prussian frontier has resulted in the repulse of all the German attempts to force a passage of the River Niemen in the government of Suwalki.

To offset this, an official statement issued in Berlin, dealing with the situation in the Carpathians, says that the Russians, in trying to cross the mountains in small columns and break through into Hungary, have been repulsed everywhere.

An official message issued in Budapest, according to a Rome dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, states that the Hungarians have recaptured Uzsook pass, in the Carpathians.

After the business session of the Knights and Ladies of Honor Wednesday, J. H. Hott, grand secretary, of Indianapolis, was present and gave an address for the good of the order. A program of music was given by Mrs. Ed Kessler and Mrs. W. R. Murph. During the social hour refreshments were served.

Miss Ethel Boswell has resigned her position as chief operator at the telephone exchange and will leave in a few days for a visit in Lafayette and Bradford, Ill.

Resolutions.

For the first time since its organization, Canton Seymour No. 11, I. O. F., has felt the touch of the hand of death. The Great Commander has seen best to deprive us of the service and leadership of our Captain, and H. Roy Luckey has been called to service on brighter fields in the great Cantonment on High.

Captain Luckey was a charter member of Canton Seymour, and in 1908 was elected to the Captaincy, which he held continually until the time of his death. Under his capable leadership, the Canton has more than tripled its membership and is recognized as one of the most efficient in the state.

If ever a man deserved the title of Chevalier, in the true and full meaning of the word, that man was H. Roy Luckey.

A spotless character, cheerful and optimistic disposition, kind and generous in his dealings with everyone, noble, courteous and self sacrificing at all times—it was a pleasure and a privilege to work with him and to serve under him. As a commanding officer, he was firm and exacting, yet withal gentle, kind and helpful. His decisions were always just, his counsel timely and wise, and his comradeship an inspiration.

He always brought to us the ability, leadership and enthusiasm which made him so successful in his profession.

As we recall our years of work together, the many gatherings where he was always a central figure, and the countless instances of his chivalrous nature and exemplary character, our hearts are bowed down with grief under our great loss.

Although it seems to us his work was not finished, his column is broken. We cannot understand, but we confirm anew our faith in the Great Captain who does understand, and who doeth all things for the best.

Captain Luckey's life and character will always be to us an inspiration and an incentive for all this is best, and his memory a priceless jewel through all time. May it help us, both as individual Chevaliers and as a Canton, to reflect and show faith some of the nobility and true greatness which was his.

We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved widow, parents, brother, sister and other loved ones, and assure them we share their sorrow.

Our swords and our charter shall remain draped in respect to our departed Captain, this tribute shall be made public in the press, copies given to the widow and parents and filed in the records of the Canton.

Respectfully and Chevalrously Submitted,

Ensign James E. Hamer.
Chev. Wm. L. Clark.
Chev. Carl R. Switzer.

Resolutions.

Hall of Seymour Lodge 204 I. O. O. F. Degree of Rebekah No. 667., Sept. 29th, 1914.

The stern fact that we are daily and hourly surrounded by death in its mysterious forms, which strikes down remorselessly the young, as well as the old, has been most terribly and suddenly emphasized by the death of our beloved brother, Dr. H. R. Luckey which occurred on September twenty-third, 1914.

Whereas: He was recognized and universally known as a young man of blameless life, honesty of purpose, uprightness and integrity of character.

Therefore, Resolved That in the death of Brother Luckey this lodge has lost a valued and honored member; his family a devoted and loving husband, son and brother, and the community a good citizen.

Resolved: That we tender our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to those bowed down by sorrow, that a copy of this testimonial be presented to the widow, also spread on the rec-

COLUMBUS MAN NAMED HEAD OF NEW STATE PENAL FARM

Appointment of Charles E. Talkington, Superintendent of Bartholomew County Schools, Announced.

Charles E. Talkington of Columbus, was selected Wednesday to be the first superintendent of the new state penal farm to be established on 1,500 acres of land in Putnam County.

His appointment was announced after a meeting in the executive offices between Governor Ralston and the penal farm trustees. The salary was fixed at $2,400 and, in addition, the superintendent will be provided with a house in which his family may live and with some of his living expenses.

Mr. Talkington is superintendent of the Bartholomew County schools and he also is a farmer. He is a graduate of the Indiana State Normal School, has attended Indiana University and has done extension work for Purdue University. He is a Democrat.

While he has had no experience in dealing with prisoners, the trustees consider that he is qualified for his new work.

Mr. Talkington will begin upon his new duties at once. With the co-operation of the trustees, he will direct the work of preparing the farm for receiving prisoners. The trustees propose to construct the buildings which will be required to house the prisoners with small expense to the state. About forty prisoners will be taken from the Reformatory and State Prison, as provided for by statute, to do the construction work. Lumber to be used for the buildings will be obtained from the trees standing on the farm.

It is said that the trustees considered a half dozen other applicants before Mr. Talkington's appointment was agreed upon.

GERMANS ADMIT A REPULSE

Force On the Meuse Beaten Back.

THE ALLIES ADVANCING

New Assault Along Lines From Verdun to Toul.

THE FRENCH ARE ENCOURAGED

All Reports Received at Paris Favorable to Defenders.

Berlin, Oct. 1.—The German general staff announces that the German army operating against the forts on the Meuse was repulsed and the French had made a new assault along the line from Verdun to Toul.

Paris, Oct. 1.—The official statements on the 18th day of the battle of the Aisne, extremely guarded though they are, give adequate reason for the belief, not only that the turning movement by the allies' left wing is continuing successfully, but that a similar action has developed on the extreme right.

The official bureau deviated slightly from its reticent course when it said that on the left wing, north of the Somme, "the action continues to develop rapidly more and more toward the north." To expectant Paris this is sufficient confirmation of a previous unofficial and vague report that the German right had been broken and that Von Kluck's great army was at last in frank and vehement retreat. Military experts take a less happy view of the situation, but all are confident that the time of German tenure of French soil is growing shorter by the hour.

German Center in Danger.

The latest official communication explained a hint in a previous statement of an advance of the French right near St. Mihiel, on the east bank of the Meuse, where the Germans had concentrated after days of desperate effort. It showed that the German left had been pushed back nearer Pont-a-Mousson, where the crown prince had had his headquarters, and that the German center would soon be in danger if the double enveloping tendency of the allies' attack was sustained.

"The general situation is satisfactory," a phrase that has not meant much to Frenchmen for several days, had considerable significance when it was pointed out that the actual situation was probably more favorable than the military authorities would admit, and the facts were adduced to show that the Germans are being driven back despite their tremendous efforts and the full play of their heaviest artillery.

The official report showed that the allies' right had begun an enveloping movement which had proceeded successfully to the heights of the River Rupt de Mad into the heart of the German fortifications and a few bare miles from the frontier. This report gave evidence that the Germans are continuing their counter attacks, but that all of these movements have been unsuccessful and that the allies' progress on the left is apparently becoming more rapid. The military experts who prudently refuse to incite the belief that the German army of Von Kluck is beaten and broken, yet admit that such a situation would naturally follow a successful prosecution of the allies' plans to envelop the German right and either to force it into hasty flight or to throw it back in confusion upon the German center.

Battle of Great Importance.

There can be no disguising of the fact that the entire German line has been in peril for several days past and that this peril has not been mitigated by the failure of the counter attacks on the allies' front. Neither can there be any weakening of the knowledge that the Germans, even in retreat, are still immensely formidable and can, in retirement, present a resistance that makes the battle of extreme importance and violence.

The admission from Berlin that the allies' right has made successful sallies from Verdun and Toul and that on the German right no decisive result has been reached, is held here as proof that the Franco-British efforts of the past few days are beginning to achieve their object. There is no doubt that the allies' center is holding firm and with that situation the only hope for the Germans was to win on the wings. This they have failed to do. If Von Kluck is in retreat it seems inevitable that the commanders of the German army on the 250-mile line must very soon follow him to prevent disaster and to get their soldiers back to the next line of defense which is awaiting them.

AMERICANS MENAGED IN LAND OF SULTAN

New Government Policy In Effect Today.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Americans and other foreigners today are without the protection of the ancient capitulations if the Ottoman government has persisted in its announced intention to regard them as no longer in force beginning Oct. 1.

The United States government has, like most of the other governments interested, lodged with the Turkish government a protest against the abrogation of these capitulations in such abrupt fashion. No reply has been received from Turkey to this protest, but it is believed here that the imperial government will for the present at least, disregard the protests of the powers.

In connection with the uncertainties of the situation in Turkey, the state department has asked the navy to send to the Mediterranean the United States cruiser Tennessee. The cruiser North Carolina already is in Turkish waters and will remain in that quarter indefinitely.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK BY RUSSIA

Desperate Battle Fought at Augustowo.

CZAR'S FORCES RETAKE TOWN

Important Engagement Led to the Retreat of General Von Hindenburg's Army From the Province of Suwalki in Russian Poland and Opens the Way For the Continued Advance of the Russians Into Prussia.

Belgrade, Oct. 1.—The Servians have recaptured Semlin after desperate fighting, thus assuring the success of the offensive movement.

London, Oct. 1.—An official statement issued by the Russian war office announces that General Rennenkampf's army has recaptured Augustowo, in Russian Poland, after extremely severe fighting with the Germans. This information is held to certify to the retreat of the German army of General Von Hindenburg from the province of Suwalki, as a result of the battle which has been raging since Sunday morning along a front extending from Grodno to Dusseniki on the Neiman river.

Augustowo is in Suwalki in Russian Poland, 149 miles northeast of Warsaw. The Augustowo canal commences there, connecting the Vistula river with the Nieman. The fighting around Augustowo has been exceptionally intense for several days. The Germans occupied the town, which is a short distance from the Russo-West Prussian frontier, about two weeks ago, and General Rennenkampf has been marshalling his forces in the forests surrounding the town, preparatory to a supreme effort.

Further Russian Successes.

Dispatches arriving here from various Russian embassies indicate that Russian successes along the entire battle front from East Prussia to Galicia have been uninterrupted during the past two days. A fresh attempt, and a violent one, by the Germans to cross the Nieman has been repulsed and at various points Von Hindenburg's forces have been pushed back across the frontier, although their retirement has been of the stubborn character that has marked all of their operations.

The battle at Tarnow, forty-eight miles east of Cracow, and an important railroad center, continues. Both sides have suffered tremendous losses, but it is believed that the Austrians must soon succumb, as the Russians are in superior force and have a high morale, fostered by a succession of victories. The advance guard of the force which entered Hungary through the Dukla pass, is now more than half way to Budapest. This invading army has thus far met with little serious opposition, and military experts assert that Austria must immediately withdraw a considerable part of the troops she has operating against Serbia and throw this strength in the path of the Russians. Support of this contention is found in the announcement that the Servians have again taken Semlin, across the Drina from Belgrade. It is presumed that the Austrians have already commenced the withdrawal of some of their soldiers from this quarter of operations.

Rout and Demoralization.

The Russian advance guard has caught up with the fleeing Austrians in the Dukla pass and have dealt severely with them, taking a large number of prisoners and guns and 400 wagons. Almost without exception reports from the field of battle in Russia detail the further rout and demoralization of the Austrians and the capture from them of supplies and armament.

The Russian capture of the Usok pass in the Carpathians was a brilliant military operation, according to descriptions of the fighting which have reached Petrograd. The Austrians fought with the desperation of despair, but the Russians would not be withheld and pushed their way up the mountain paths in the face of a destructive fire, without faltering.

Germans Destroy Another Town.

PEACE COMMISSION MEETS IN MEXICO

Villa and Carranza May Yet Agree.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Carranza will let the Constitutional convention which met in Mexico City today, decide whether he is to retire to private life, or lead the fight against Villa, according to a statement issued by the Constitutional first chief, given out at the agency here.

Carranza has authorized the agency to announce that his resignation as the leader of the Constitutionalist movement and head of the present government in Mexico will go before the convention. Should the convention of Constitutionalists accept it, Carranza announces that he will retire to private life at once. Should they refuse it, he will lead the forces at his disposal to combat with what he terms "the new reactionary movement" led by Villa. Carranza announced that he is opposed to the outline of a provisional government that Villa has demanded that he accept.

A peace commission headed by General Obregon has been sent north to treat with General Villa, according to Carranza's statement. This peace commission, it is understood, will meet Villa or his representative at Aguas Calientes. Since Carranza has said that he would consent to step down if Villa would do the same, and inasmuch as Villa continues to maintain that a settlement is possible, it is taken to mean that Villa will agree not to be a candidate. While Carranza may stay out of the approaching elections, he will be a candidate for president later.

No fresh reports of military movements, either from Sonora or the Zacatecas region, have been received here. No movements are expected until after the conference between Villa and Obregon.

A SERIES OF RECESSES

Will Give Congressmen an Opportunity For Fence Building.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Majority Leader Underwood is convinced that within two or three days a way will be found to arrange a pact between the two parties in congress whereby a series of recesses from Oct. 10 to Nov. 15 will permit the members of the lower house to return to their homes for the campaign. Mr. Underwood intimated very strongly that this plan had the approval of the president, who, he said, was willing that the shipping bill should be shoved aside for the period of the campaign with the understanding that it would be considered in the house the moment the recess was ended.

CRUSHING THE BELGIAN FORTS

German Siege Guns Inflict Great Damage.

CLOSING IN ON ANTWERP

Belgium's Temporary Capital Is Daily Becoming More and More Endangered by the Terrific Assaults Rained Upon Its Redoubts While the Investing Army Is Constantly Receiving Fresh Reinforcements.

Rome, Oct. 1.—A dispatch received here says that the kaiser is very ill at Suwalki. He is reported to be suffering from inflammation of the lungs.

London, Oct. 1.—An Antwerp dispatch says that the huge German siege guns have inflicted great damage on Fort Waelheim, which has been under fire for two days and that at 3 o'clock yesterday the magazine of the fort blew up. Fort Waelheim is one of the strongest forts of the outer chain surrounding Antwerp. Word from Rotterdam says that German troops are still pouring through Belgium from Germany and are marching to complete the investment of Antwerp.

Before word of the partial destruction of Waelheim had reached here the Belgian war office had announced that bombardment at long range of the outer chain of fortifications had abated. The statement said:

"A vigorous German bombardment of Forts Waelheim, Wavre and St. Catherine, which was continued throughout the night, abated at 8 o'clock this morning. The assailants did not succeed in silencing the guns of the Belgian forts, nor did they in any way succeed in lowering the morale of the garrisons. At no point did the German infantry dare to move against the first lines of defense. Only one attempt was made directed against Forts Laesele and Breedonk. Our troops, holding positions between works, allowed the enemy to advance until they were within close range, when the artillery and infantry, working in a remarkable combination, showered the attacking force with a hail of projectiles and bullets which threw their ranks into disorder and compelled a precipitate retreat. This attempt cost the Germans dearly and was not repeated. In short, the events of the day confirm the confidence of Belgians in the power of resistance of their national redoubt."

Reports from correspondents at various points in Belgium indicate that nearly 200,000 troops are engaged in battle on a line extending from Termonde to Aerschot. The Germans are said to have suffered serious losses, but their superior artillery and the heavy reinforcements rushed to the front apparently are overcoming the Belgians slowly but surely.

A PLAN TO RELIEVE A TRADE SHORTAGE

American Manufacturers Are In Need of German Goods.

Washington, Oct. 1.—As a result of a conference of commercial interests and government officials held here, an American ship probably will be chartered to go to Germany for a cargo of materials, the lack of which is now embarrassing American manufacturers.

Ever since the war began American industries dependent upon German products have been seriously threatened owing to the difficulty of getting any goods from Germany. The materials involved are dyestuffs, medicine, textiles, leather, paints, inks, pharmaceutical chemicals, cyanide, sugar beet seeds and potash. The cotton industry was on the verge of serious stoppage for the lack of dyes; drug manufacturers were confronted by a famine of pharmaceutical chemicals and the mining industry was feeling the lack of cyanide supplies.

Tentative arrangements have been made with the Berlin government for the execution of the American plan for getting the much needed materials from Germany.

The conference was called by the state department after word was received that Germany would co-operate in the plan. It is believed by officials here that the allied governments will not raise any objections to the American plan.

Society's Mandates.

Society can and does execute its own mandates, and if it issues wrong mandates instead of right or any mandates at all in things with which it ought not to meddle it practices a social tyranny more formidable than many kinds of political oppression, since, though not usually upheld by such extreme penalties, it leaves fewer means of escape, penetrating much more deeply into the minute details of life and enslaving even the soul itself.—John Stuart Mill.

The Last Shot

FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)
CHAPTER X.

Marta's First Glimpse of War.

As Marta and the children came to the door of the chapel after the recitation of the oath, she saw the civil population moving along the street in the direction of the range. There was nothing for Marta to do but start homeward. The thought that her mother was alone made her hasten at a pace much more rapid than the procession of people, whose talk and exclamations formed a monotone audible in its nearness, despite the continuous rifle-fire, now broken by the pounding of the guns.

"It's all done to beat the Grays, isn't it, Miss Galland? They are trying to take our land," said Jacky Werther as Marta parted from him.

"Yes, it is done to beat the Grays," she answered. "Good luck, Jacky!"

Yes, yes, to beat the Grays! The same idea—the fighting nature, the brute nature of man—animated both sides. Had the Browns really tried for peace? Had they, in the spirit of her oath, appealed to justice and reason? Why hadn't their premier before all the world said to the premier of the Grays, as one honest, friendly neighbor to another over a matter of dispute:

"We do not want war. We know you outnumber us, but we know you would not take advantage of that. If we are wrong we will make amends; if you are wrong we know that you will. Let us not play tricks in secret to gain points, we civilized nations, but be frank with each other. Let us not try to irritate each other or to influence our people, but to realize how much we have in common and that our only purpose is common progress and happiness."

At the turn of the road in front of the castle she saw the gunners of the batteries making an emplacement for their guns in a field of carrots that had not yet been harvested. The roots of golden yellow were mixed with the tossing spades of earth.

A shadow like a great cloud in mad flight shot over the earth, and with the gunners she looked up to see a Gray dirigible. Already it was turning homeward; already it had gained its object as a scout. On the fragile platform of the gondola was a man, seemingly a human mite aiming a tiny toy gun. His target was one of the Brown aeroplanes.

"They're in danger of cutting their own envelope! They can't get the angle! The plane is too high!" exclaimed the artillery commander. Both he and his men forgot their work in watching the spectacle of aerial David against aerial Goliath. "If our man lands with his little bomb, oh, my!" he grinned. "That's why he is so high. He's been waiting up there."

"Pray God he will!" exclaimed one of the gunners.

"Look at him volplane—motor at full speed, too!"

"Into it! Making sure! Oh, splen—O!" cried the artillery commander.

A ball of lightning shot forth sheets of flame. Dirigible and plane were hidden in an ugly swirl of yellowish smoke, rolling out into a purple cloud that spread into prismatic mist over the descent of cowering human bodies and broken machinery and twisted braces, flying pieces of tattered or burning cloth. David had taken Goliath down with him in a death grip.

An aeroplane following the dirigible as a screen, hoping to get home with information if the dirigible were lost, had escaped the sharpshooters in the church tower by flying around the town. However, it ran within range of the automatic and the sharpshooters on top of the castle tower. They failed of the bull's-eye, but their bullets, rimming the target, crippling the motor, and cutting braces, brought the crumpling wings about the helpless pilot. The watching gunners uttered "Ahs!" of horror and triumph as they saw him fall, gliding this way and that, in the agony of slow descent.

"Come, now!" called the artillery commander. "We are wasting precious time."

Entering the grounds of the Galland house, Marta had to pass to one side of the path, now blocked by army wagons and engineers' materials and tools. Soldiers carrying sand-bags were taking the shortest cut, trampling the flowers on their way.

"Do you know whose property this is?" she demanded in a burst of anger.

"Ours—the nation's!" answered one, perspiring freely at his work. "Sorry!" he added on second thought.

Already parts of the first terrace were shoulder-high with sand-bags and one automatic had been set in place, Marta observed as she turned to the veranda. There her mother sat in her favorite chair, hands relaxed as they rested on its arms, while she looked out over the valley in the supertranquility that comes to some women under a strain—as soldiers who have been on sieges can tell you—that some psychologists interpret one way and some another, none knowing even their own wives.

"Marta, did any of the children come?" Mrs. Galland asked in her usual pleasant tone. So far as she was concerned, the activity on the terrace did not exist. She seemed oblivious of the fact of war.

Marta's monosyllabic absently answering the question was expressive of her wonder at her mother. Most girls do not know their mothers much better than psychologists know their wives.

"Marta, whatever happens one should go regularly about what he considers his duty," said Mrs. Galland. "They have been as considerate as they could, evidently by Colonel Lanstron's orders," she proceeded, nodding toward the industrious engineers. "And they've packed all the paintings able to change their course. But imagination could picture the fearful clash of forces, whose wounded would find the succor of no hospital except impact on the earth below.

Marta put her hands over her eyes for only a second, she thought, before she withdrew them in vexation—hadn't she promised herself not to be cowardly?—to see one Brown dirigible and two Brown aeroplanes ascending at a sharp angle above a cloud of smoke to escape the high-angle guns of the Grays.

"We've got them all! No lips survive to tell what the eye saw!" exclaimed the engineer captain, his words bubbling with the joy of water in the sunlight. "As I thought," he continued in professional enthusiasm and discrimination.

With high-power binoculars glued to his eyes, he then turned to see if the faint brown line of Dellarme's men were going to hold or break. If it held, he might have hours in which to complete his task; if it broke, he had only minutes.

Marta came up the terrace path from the chrysanthemum bed in time to watch the shroud of shrapnel smoke billowing over the knoll, to visualize another scene in place of the collision of the squadrons, and to note the captain's exultation over Fracasse's repulse.

"How we must have punished them!" he exclaimed to his lieutenant. "How we must have mowed them down! Lanstron certainly knew what he was doing."

"You mean that he knew how we should mow them down?" asked Marta. Not until she spoke did he realize that she was standing near him.

"Why, naturally! If we hadn't mowed them down his plan would have failed. Mowing them down was the only way to hold them back," he said; and seeing her horror made haste to add: "Miss Galland, now you know what a ghastly business war is. It will be worse here than there."

"Yes," she said blankly. Her colorless cheeks, her drooping underlip convinced him that now, with a little show of masculine authority, he would gain his point.

"You and your mother must go!" he said firmly.

This was the very thing to whip her thoughts back from the knoll. He was thunderstruck at the transformation: hot color in her cheeks, eyes aflame, lips curving around a whirlwind of words.

"You name the very reason why I wish to stay. Why do you want to save the women? Why shouldn't they bear their share? Why don't you want them to see men mowed down? Is it because you are ashamed of your profession? Why, I ask?"

The problem of dealing with an angry woman breaking a shell fire of questions over his head had not been ready solved in the captain's curriculum like other professional problems, nor was it mentioned in the official instructions about the defenses of the Galland house. He aimed to smile soothingly in the helplessness of man in presence of feminine fury.

"It is an old custom," he was saying, but she had turned away.

"Lanny's plan—mow them down! mow them down! mow them down!" she went on, more to herself than to him.

Was there nothing for her to do? Could she only look on in a fever of restlessness while action roared around her? The sight of several automobile ambulances in the road at the foot of the garden stilled the throbs of distraction in her temples with an answer. The wounded! They were already coming in from the field. She hurried down the terrace steps. The major surgeon in charge, surprised to find any woman in the vicinity, was about to tell her so automatically; then, in view of her intensity, he waited for her to speak.

"You will let us do something for them?" Marta asked. "We will make them some hot soup."

He was immediately businesslike. No less than Dellarme or Fracasse or Lanstron or Westerling, he had been preparing throughout his professional career for this hour. The detail of caring for the men who were down had been worked out no less systematically than that of wounding them.

"Thank you, no! We don't want to waste time," he replied. "We must get them away with all speed so that the ambulances may return promptly. It's only a fifteen-minute run to the hospital, where every comfort and appliance are ready and where they will be given the right things to eat."

"Then we will give them some wine!" Marta persisted.

"Not if we can prevent it! Not to start hemorrhages! The field doctors have brandy for use when advisable, and there is brandy in all the ambulances."

Clearly, volunteer service was not wanted. There was no room at the immediate front for Florence Nightingales in the modern machine of war.

"Then water?"

The major surgeon aimed to be patient to an earnest, attractive young woman.

"We have sterilized water—we have everything," he explained. "If we hadn't at this early stage I ought to be serving an apprenticeship in a village apothecary shop. Anything that means confusion, delay, unnecessary excitement is bad and unmerciful."

Marta was not yet at the end of her resources. The recollection of the dying private who had asked her mother for a rose in the last war flashed into mind.

"You haven't any flowers! They won't do any harm, even if they aren't sterilized. The wounded like flowers, don't they? Don't you like flowers? Look! We've millions!"

"Yes, I do. They do. A good idea. Bring all the flowers you want to."

The major surgeon's smile to Marta was not altogether on account of her suggestion. "It ought to help anybody who was ever wounded anywhere in the world to have you give him a flower!" he was thinking.

She ran for an armful of blossoms and was back before the arrival of the first wounded man who preceded the stretchers on foot. He was holding up a hand bound in a white first-aid bandage which had a red spot in the center. Those hit in hand or arm, if the surgeon's glance justified it, were sent on up the road to a point a mile distant, where transportation in requisitioned vehicles was provided. These men were triumphant in their cheerfulness. They were alive; they had done their duty, and they had the proof of it in the coming souvenirs of scars.

Some of the forms on stretchers had peaceful faces in unconsciousness of their condition. Others had a look of wonder, of pain, of apprehension in their consciousness that death might be near. The single word "Shrapnel!" by a hospital-corporal told the story of crushed or lacerated features, in explanation of a white cloth covering a head with body uninjured.

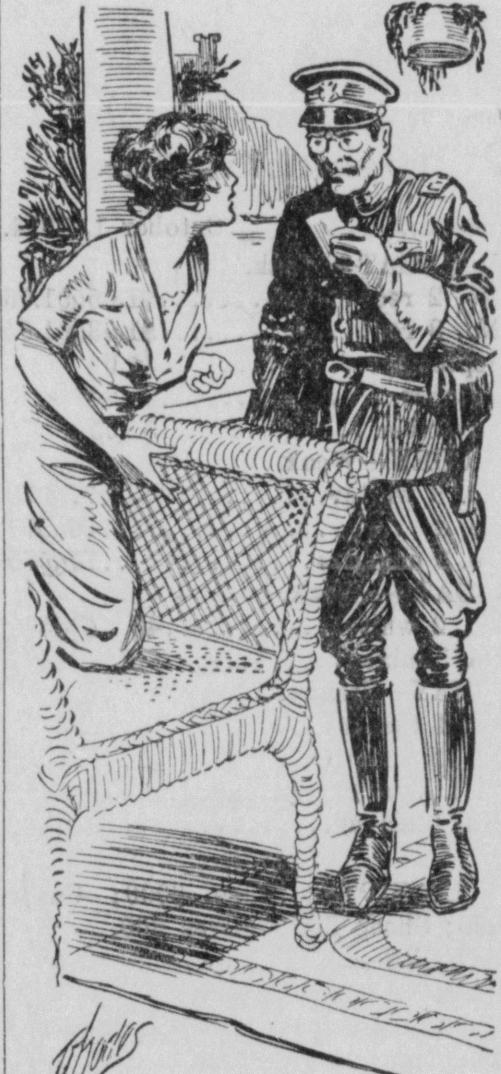

Many of the wounded looked at Marta even more than at the flowers. It was good to see the face of a woman, her eyes limpid with sympathy, and it was not what she said but the way she spoke that brought smiles in response to hers. For she was no solemn ministering angel, but high-spirited, cheery, of the sort that the major surgeon would have chosen to distribute flowers to the men. Every remark of the victims of war made its distinct and indelible impression on the gelatin of her mind.

"I like my blue aster better than that yellow weed of yours, Tom!"

"You didn't know Ed Schmidt got it? Yes, he was right next to me in the line."

"Say, did you notice Dellarme's smile? It was wonderful!"

"And old Bert Stransky! I heard

"Why Do You Want to Save the Women?"

him whistling the wedding march as he fired."

"Miss, I'll keep this flower forever!"

"They say Billy Lister will live—his cheek was shot away!"

"Once we got going I didn't mind. It seemed like as if I'd been fighting for years!"

"Hole no bigger than a lead-pencil. I'll be back in a week!"

"Yes; don't these little bullets make neat little holes?"

"We certainly gave them a surprise when they came up the hill! I wonder if we missed the fellow that jumped into the shell crater!"

"Our company got it worst!"

"Not any worse than ours, I'll wager!"

"Oh—oh—can't you go easier? Oh—h—h—the groan ending in a clenching of the teeth."

"Hello, Jake! You here, too, and going in my automobile? And we've both got lower berths!"

"Sh-h! That poor chap's dying!"

Worst of all to Marta was the case of a shrapnel fracture of the cranium, with the resulting delirium, in which the sufferer's incoherence included memories of childhood scenes, moments on the firing-line, calls for his mother, and prayers to be put out of misery. A prod of the hypodermic from the major surgeon, and "On the operating table in fifteen minutes" was the answer to Marta's question if the poor fellow would live.

Until dark, in groups, at intervals, and again singly, the wounded were coming in from a brigade front in the region where the rifles were crackling and the shrapnel clouds were hanging prettily over the hills; and stretchers were being slipped into place in the ambulances, while Marta kept at her post.

"We shan't have much more to do at this station," said the major surgeon when a plodding section of infantry in retreat arrived.

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. LANSENG, Route No. 1, Florence, South Dakota.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Handkerchief Trick.

To take two corners of a handkerchief, one in each hand, and with a single straight motion and without letting go either corner, to tie a knot in the handkerchief seems at first thought impossible. Nevertheless it is simple. Before you take hold of the handkerchief fold your arms, then grasp the two corners of the handkerchief. Holding an opposite corner in each hand, draw the arms apart. That single straight movement will tie the knot.

What Would You Do?

There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Men act differently under different circumstances. The question is, what would you do right now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.

REPUBLICANS ENTHUSIASTIC

Reports Received Indicate the Tremendous Gains.

BULL MOOSE LOSING STRENGTH

Organization Meetings Held Throughout State Show Farmers in Line—Many Clubs Being Formed to Assist Republican Organization.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—Experience political observers declare they never saw such interest in Republican organization meetings as is being manifested this year. This is attributed to three causes: The tremendous interest and activity manifested by the young men of the party, the return of thousands of Progressives to the Republican fold and the fact that the people are thoroughly aroused to free the country from Democratic domination in township, county, state and nation.

Republicans are bubbling over with enthusiasm at the meetings held in the rural districts showing that the farmers are actively engaged in organization work. All of the township meetings are being largely attended. Reports from St. Joseph, Lake and Jasper counties show immense Republican gains. There is a great deal of dissatisfaction in the three counties mentioned as well as in every county in the state. Business has been very slack in the Calumet region and in St. Joe county especially and this has caused the working people to stop and consider which side of their bread carries the butter. With many of the workmen it has been a hard proposition to get the bread, let alone the butter. The Progressive strength has been rapidly diminishing in all three counties and the Republican organization there has never been in better shape than it is today. There is no question but what the Republicans are making tremendous gains all through northern Indiana.

Reports received from meetings held in Montgomery county, Cass county, Decatur county, Whitley county, and Howard county, show that the Republicans are making steady gains in each of those localities. Strong township tickets have been nominated at each place.

At the Columbia City meeting arrangements were made for holding a Republican love feast and banquet on October 2. Reports from there show the Democrats are already conceding that there is a splendid chance there for several of the candidates on the Republican ticket. Considering that this is the home of Vice-president Marshall it is all the more gratifying to Republican leaders.

At a rousing meeting held the other day at Marion, Grant county Republicans organized the Grant county Republican club, to be composed entirely of professional men. Another club is being formed among business men. The two clubs will co-operate with the Republican county organization during the campaign.

Clay county Republicans are chuck full of confidence over the gratifying reports being received there and are confident of electing the entire ticket. Roy Shattuck, of Brazil, candidate for congress in the Fifth district, is letting no grass grow under his feet and is now engaged in a thorough canvass of the district, working this week in Putnam county.

Precinct meetings held this week in Jackson county were more largely attended and enthusiastic than in many years. The township chairmen are highly pleased with the outlook there and the indications are that the approaching county convention will be one of the biggest in the history of the Republican party in Jackson county.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOLS WILL CLOSE AFTER WEDNESDAY

Two Days' Holiday Will be Given Pupils So They can Attend the Festival in Seymour.

Charles Steinwedel, trustee of Jackson township, announced today that all the township schools will close Wednesday afternoon for the week because of the fall festival in this city. By this arrangement the pupils will be given a holiday on Thursday and Friday and with the regular holiday, Saturday, they will have an opportunity to attend the festival three days if they desire.

Before announcing the plan Mr. Steinwedel conferred with quite a number of parents who desired that their children be given an opportunity to inspect the exhibits. In some of the schools the pupils are making a study of seed testing and will find the farm product exhibits instructive.

To a Dead Comrade

Ah, not that face! You were our friend—
Too close to be so silent now!
The love, the laughter, at an end
In austere lips and brow

We loved you, but we went our ways,
Undreaming in our rash content
That you were dropping numbered days
Along the roads we went.

We loved you, but we never guessed
Your ardors and your shining powers
Were aiming for a farther quest
Than any quest of ours.

Good night, dear comrade! As we part
Not idle praise nor tears we bring
But see! Our hearts stand round your heart
Like warriors round a king

AN ORIGINAL ARGUMENT FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE.

Outline of Proposal of Hamilton Holt—
"America's Destiny to Lead."

Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, in that publication presents what he considers is an original argument for universal peace under the title, "The Way to Disarm—A Practical Proposal."

Mr. Holt in part writes:
"In his famous essay, 'Perpetual Peace,' published in 1795, Emmanuel Kant declared that we never can have universal peace until the world is politically organized, and it will never be possible to organize the world politically until the people, not the kings, rule."

"A careful study of the formation of the thirteen American colonies from separate states into our present compact Union discloses the fact that the nations today are in the same stage of development that the American colonies were about the time of their first confederation."

"Let the League of Peace be formed on the following five principles:

"First.—The nations of the league shall mutually agree to respect the territory and sovereignty of each other."

"Second.—All questions that cannot be settled by diplomacy shall be arbitrated."

"Third.—The nations of the league shall provide a periodical assembly to make all rules to become law unless vetoed by a nation within a stated period."

"Fourth.—The nations shall disarm to the point where the combined forces of the league shall be a certain per cent higher than those of the most heavily armed nation or alliance outside the league. Detailed rules for this pro rata disarmament shall be formulated by the assembly."

"Fifth.—Any member of the league shall have the right to withdraw on due notice or may be expelled by the unanimous vote of the others."

Mr. Holt concludes with this statement: "It would seem to be the manifest destiny of the United States to lead in the establishment of such a league."

TO INCREASE BIRTH RATE.

British Fighters Urged to Marry Before Going to War.

Realization of the necessity of a high birth rate to offset the deaths due to the war has led to a movement in England to reduce marriage fees and to encourage soldiers and sailors to take wives before leaving for the front.

The archbishop of Canterbury has addressed an open letter on the subject to a London paper, and he has likewise sent a strong letter to all the bishops urging them to reduce the marriage license fees so that soldiers and sailors summoned to active service may marry before leaving home. The marriage fees total $10, which includes $2.50 in stamp duty to the government. The archbishop has requested the government to waive the payment of this duty in the case of recruits.

Many dioceses already have lowered the license fee to $2.50, and the clergymen are waiving their right to personal fees.

The wholesale encouragement of marriages on the part of the soldiers and sailors of Germany, Austria and France has attracted much attention in England and probably inspired the archbishop's action.

HERE'S A RIVAL TO TIPPERARY

All England Singing "Fall In," New War Song.

All England is singing a new war song. It is by Sir Frederick Cowen and Harold Begbie and makes a strong appeal for enlistment in the army. One of the verses of the song, which is entitled "Fall In," follows:

How will you fare, sonny, how will you fare
In the far off winter night
When you sit by the fire in an old man's chair
And your neighbors talk of the fight?
Will you sink away, as it were, from a blow,
Your old head shamed and bent,
Or say, "I was not with the first to go,
But I went, thank God, I went?"

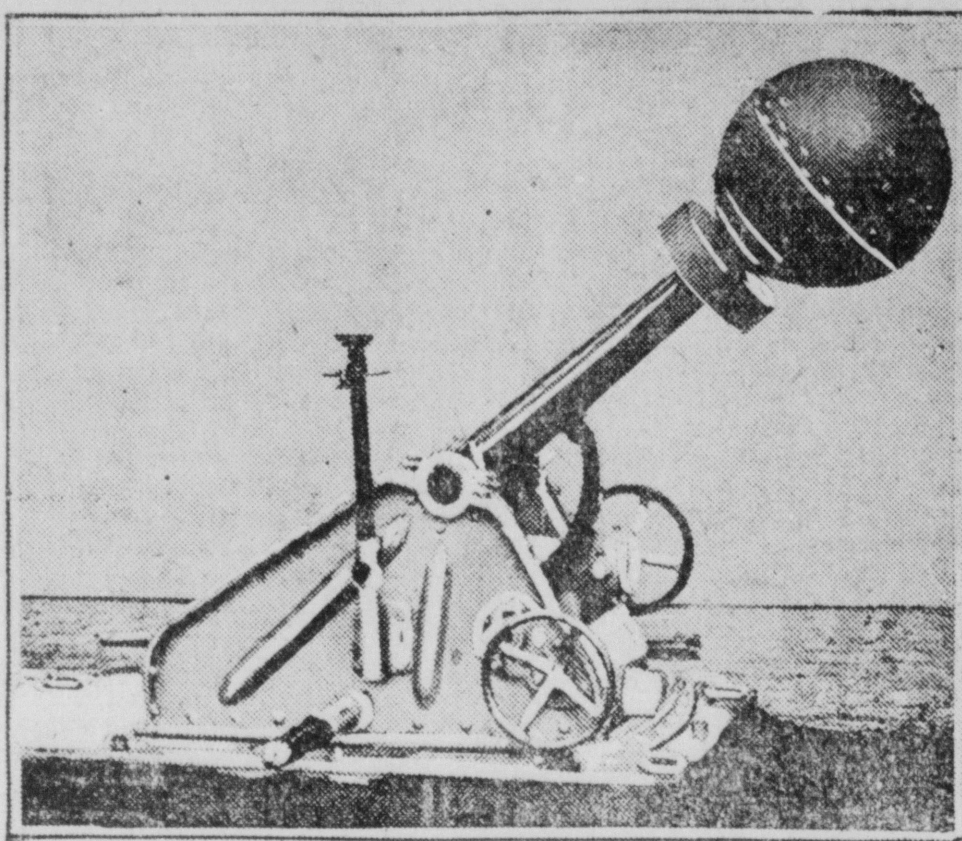

Germans Haul Big Guns in Pieces.

A detailed account of the movement of two big German forty-two centimeter (16.5 inch) siege guns northward toward Brussels has reached Ostend from a man who has been traveling on the same road with them. For their hauling the two guns need no fewer than twenty-six traction engines. Each gun is in four pieces, and each piece is drawn by three traction engines.

No "Russian" Bath Now.

Moved by a similar spirit to that which led the Russians to change the name of their capital from St. Petersburg to the more Russian Petrograd, Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Germany, has ordered the elimination of the terms "Russian, Roman and Irish baths" from the bathing pavilions of the municipal swimming pool.
